Remembering 9/11: 2021 Reflections

If you lived through September 11, 2001, you will remember, facts, images, feelings. But how do you remember the event? In your fluid memory, what is the timeline? What was most disturbing or hopeful? What are the emotions or feeling that you still carry?

New Growth

A simple seed — hope for a future — how does the earth survive?

Starting 6600 million years ago, the earth evolved in stages with the formation of the core, the mantle, an oceanic-type crust, ancient platforms, and now consolidation — reflected today in what we understand as climate change and atmospheric escape, natural disasters, human interferences, or animal interaction. . .

As humans we understand only a micro segment of the big picture — nature continues. And may there always be a “seed” for the future, a new growth.
